• Potential ILR after 3 years, subject to settlement requirements.

• Eligible outside skilled employment permitted alongside the business.

11. Why Candidates Fail Endorsement - and How to Avoid It

The idea is not genuinely innovative

How to avoid: Demonstrate a real market problem, original solution and meaningful competitive advantage.

The founder cannot explain the innovation

How to avoid: The founder must understand and genuinely contribute to the proposition.

Weak connection between founder and business

How to avoid: Align the concept with the founder's background or explain how missing capability will be secured.

Weak market research

How to avoid: Use credible research, competitor analysis, surveys, LOIs, testing or pilot evidence where appropriate.

Unrealistic financial forecasts

How to avoid: Use defensible assumptions for pricing, costs, customer acquisition, revenue and growth.

Weak scalability

How to avoid: Show realistic job creation, operational scaling and national/international expansion.

Poor interview preparation

How to avoid: Prepare for detailed questions on innovation, finances, competition and implementation.

Business plan and interview answers do not match

How to avoid: Keep the founder actively involved in development so written and verbal evidence remain consistent.
